

Reviewing Did Adam and Eve Really Exist?

J.W. Francis

Department of Biological and Physical Sciences, The Master's College, Santa Clarita, CA

Editor: T.C. Wood

Received October 1, 2012; Accepted October 1, 2012; Published October 29, 2012

The Journal of Creation, Theology and Science Series B: Life Sciences (JCTSB) is a journal founded by the Creation Biology Society, a society dedicated to dissemination of work by young age creationists. JCTSB also solicits book reviews relevant to the focus of the journal. In the past year the executive editorial staff of JCTSB was intrigued by the book Did Adam and Eve Really Exist? Who They Were and Why You Should Care by Professor C. John Collins of Covenant Theological Seminary. In his text, Dr. Collins, a theologian who is not a young age creationist, reaffirmed the traditional position of conservative evangelical scholars that Adam and Eve, were in fact the historical founding couple of human creation. We found that Dr. Collins's voice is important and relevant to the current debate about the historicity of Genesis and the historicity of Adam and Eve. In light of that, we invited authors within or associated with our society to review this important text. We publish here the reviews of Dr. Collins's text and his response to these reviews. We were delighted to see that all the reviewers agreed that Dr. Collins has contributed an important work even though different views of creation doctrine were noted among the reviewers and Dr. Collins. We thank the reviewers and Dr. Collins for their correspondence and dialogue.